

Address injustice, says AIFF seeking probe into Qatar's controversial goal in WC qualifier

PTI ■ NEW DELHI

The All India Football Federation has sought an investigation into the controversial goal awarded to Qatar in their crucial World Cup qualifying match in Doha, AIFF President Kalyan Chaubey said on Wednesday while urging the concerned authorities to "address the injustice".

The AIFF chief said India have asked for a thorough investigation into the goal that was allowed by South Korean referee Kim Woo-Sung despite the ball clearly going out of play during the must-win match that the visitors lost 1-2 at Jassim Bin Hamad Stadium on Tuesday.

"Victory and defeat are part and parcel of the game, we have learned to accept gracefully, although one of the two goals scored against India yesterday night left a few questions unanswered," Chaubey said in a statement. The goal sparked widespread outrage as it deprived the Indians of what would have been their maiden entry into the third round of the FIFA World Cup Qualifiers for the 2026 edition.

"We have written to FIFA Head of Qualifiers, AFC Head of Referees, and the match commissioner, regarding the grave supervision error that practically cost us a place in the FIFA World Cup Qualifiers Round 3.

"Given it's severity, We call upon concerned officials for a thorough investigation. We have urged them to explore the possibilities of sporting compensation to address the injustice and we trust that FIFA and AFC will take necessary steps," he added.

Iran's Hamed Momeni was the match commissioner for the game. The role requires him to supervise the organisation of the match and ensure that FIFA regulations are adhered to during the game.

In the 73rd minute, Abdullah Alahrak's free-kick saw Yousef Ayem attempt a header, which was saved by India skipper and goalkeeper Gurpreet Singh Sandhu.

But as the custodian lay on the ground seeing the ball roll over the line, Hashmi Hussein kicked it into play with Aymen slotting it into the net.

Since the ball had visibly rolled out of play, the game should have stopped and then resumed with a corner-kick in this case as Sandhu was the last player to come in contact with the ball before it went out.

But, to the frustration of the Indian players, the referee awarded the goal to Qatar and despite the visiting team protesting vehemently, the on-field official upheld his decision. According to FIFA rules, "the ball is out of play if it is wholly passed over the goal line or touchline on the ground or in the air."

India coach Igor Stimac later expressed his dismay by stating that the "irregular" goal killed his team's dream.

Sandhu called it an "unfortunate result" demonstrated that "no one will hand us anything, we have to take it!"

Tamberi puts on a show in Rome to win another European high jump title

AP ■ ROME

Gianmarco Tamberi bowed to Italy's president before and during the competition. Then came an embrace in the stands with his country's leader when the charismatic Olympic high jump champion clinched another European title and sealed his status as a favorite to defend gold at the Paris Games.

Tamberi, styled in his preferred half-shaved beard, had already won the competition before he cleared a championship-record 2.37 meters on his first attempt to add more luster to his third title at the European athletics championships on Tuesday.

"I knew I was in a superb shape and I proved it," Tamberi said. "I pretended to be injured and hid springs in my shoes. I think some people fell for it. I did great things. Now it's time for the Olympics."

Two Ukrainians, Vladyslav Lavskyy (2.29) and Oleh Doroshchuk (2.26), took silver and bronze, respectively.

Up next for Tamberi, who shared gold with his good friend Mutaz Barshim at the Tokyo Games, is another meeting on Thursday with Italy President Sergio Mattarella to officially be handed the country's flag that he and fencer Arianna Errigo will carry at the Paris opening ceremony on July 26.

Tamberi is also the captain of Italy's rapidly improving athletics team, which is leading the medals table at the Euros with a national record 10 golds and 20 medals overall. Karsten Warholm of Norway and Femke Bol of the Netherlands won the men's and women's 400 hurdles, respectively, by large margins - with both setting championship records.

Warholm clocked 46.98 - more than a second off his world record of 45.94 set at the Tokyo Olympics.

Bol won in 52.49 to shave 0.18 off her championship record from two years ago and reclaim the season lead from American standout Sydney McLaughlin-Levrone, who ran 52.70 on May 31.

Bol finished nearly two seconds ahead of silver medalist Louise Maraval of France, while her Dutch teammate Cathelijn Peeters took bronze.

So how does Bol keep going when she's so far ahead of the rest of the field?

"I visualize I'm running toward someone. It always helps me a lot," she said. "But when you have an atmosphere like this, it also helps a lot. You hear the crowd and you just want to do well for them. ... They were already applauding for Gianmarco. It was something crazy."

Warholm established a big lead but then silver medalist Alessandro Sibillo made up some ground during the final meters.

"I was testing the pace a little bit in the beginning, going out super hard and then coming up on the home stretch, testing a little bit the same stride pattern as yesterday," Warholm said. "It was a little bit of a stutter step there. But I felt strong coming off hurdle 10 and I was in control."

"For Paris there will be some more (speed).

... This is a good step on the road. But this is more to build confidence, and of course to get the gold medal. But in Paris everything will be as sharp as possible."

There was also a championship record in the triple jump, when Jordan Diaz of Spain leaped 18.18 to improve on Jonathan Edwards' mark of 17.99 from more than a quarter century ago.

Silver medalist Pedro Pichardo of Portugal, the Cuban-born Olympic champion, also beat Edwards' mark with 18.04, while Thomas Gogois of France took bronze with 17.38.

Along with the long jump, the triple jump was held on a raised platform right next to the Stadio Olimpico stands that competitors said provided more "bounce."

The championships end Wednesday when Armand Duplantis could make another attempt at extending his pole vault world record. Also, Marcell Jacobs and Olympic champion Italy will have the home crowd behind them in the 4x100 relay.

Turkey can expect strong support from Turkish-German community at Euro 2024; so can Germany

AP ■ DUESSELDORF (GERMANY)

Six years ago, Ilkay Gundogan's place on the German national team was in question over a photograph with Turkey's president. Now, he's the team captain.

When Gundogan leads the German national team out against Scotland in the European Championship opener on Friday, he will be its first captain of Turkish heritage at a major tournament.

To some in the large Turkish-German community, the Barcelona midfielder embodies a "hybrid identity" that is gaining ground even in the face of political gains for the anti-migration far right, said Caner Aver, a researcher at the Center for Turkish Studies and Integration Research in the German city of Essen.

While Gundogan had to choose which country to represent on the field, fans can support both. As the tournament nears, Aver bought a German and a Turkish national team shirt for his six-year-old son, cut them in half, and stitched the halves together to make his hybrid kit.

"I think there will be a lot of people who support both national teams and who would probably be pleased if they were to meet at some point in the semi-finals or final," Aver told The Associated Press.

One of those supporting both Germany and Turkey is Osman Eroglu, who is a goalkeeper and board member at Turkoglu Ratingen, a Turkish community soccer club on the outskirts of Euro 2024 host city Dusseldorf.

"For us, for people with a migration background in the third or the fourth generation by now, it's a European Championship in our own country too, after all," Eroglu told The AP.

"It's double the joy because Turkey is represented this year too, so there are two teams straight away that you can support and cross your fingers for."

Others question whether players from minority groups might be scapegoats for German fans or the media if the team falls short. Some even see choosing Germany over Turkey as an act of betrayal.

Gundogan was particularly targeted with booing by some fans of the Turkish national team in a friendly game against Germany in Berlin last year that Turkey won 3-2.

When Gundogan and teammate Mesut Ozil, another star German player of Turkish heritage, posed for photos with Turkey's president Recep Tayyip Erdogan in the run-up to the 2018 World Cup, they faced pointed criticism from the German soccer federation's president at the time, Reinhard Grindel, who said Erdogan didn't sufficiently share the organization's "values."

After the World Cup, Ozil quit the national team, citing a "feeling of racism and disrespect" following anti-Turkish comments from far-right politicians and fans. Ozil never played for Germany again and retired from soccer last year.

Younis Kamil is an academic and soccer coach of Sudanese and German heritage who is working with a major Turkish community organization in Germany and the national Olympic committee on a project around Euro 2024 and sports participation for people with a family history of migration.

Even with Gundogan as captain, there are few people of Turkish heritage, and from other minority groups in coaching and authority roles in German soccer, Kamil said.

"There's still a gap between the possibility of identification with the German national team, and I think one of the main reasons is the lack of representation in the decision-making structures, and also experiences of discrimination young people make in their daily lives," Kamil told the AP.

The Turkish national team has five German-born players in its squad and is counting on enthusiastic support.

"In Germany, we're going to be like a host country," Turkey defender Ozan Kabak, who was born in Turkey but plays his club soccer in Germany, said in a recent interview.

"A lot of Turkish people live here, and I think whole stadiums (are) going to be full of Turkish people."

Fans of the Turkish team even outnumbered Germany's supporters at the friendly in Berlin last year. Unfortunately for Kabak, he won't be playing when Turkey starts its Euro 2024 campaign on June 18 after a pre-tournament knee injury.

Turkey plays its first two Euro 2024 games against Georgia and Portugal in Dortmund before facing the Czech Republic in Hamburg. Both cities have many residents of Turkish heritage.

Many people of Turkish origin in Germany are descended from "guest workers" who arrived during the Cold War. An economic boom after World War II meant West Germany had an acute shortage of labour.

A history of migration from places like Italy, Greece and Croatia - and more recently the arrival of refugees from Ukraine - means those teams are also likely to get substantial local support.

This year also brings a significant legal change as long-standing restrictions on dual nationality are abolished, making it much easier for naturalized German citizens to keep Turkish passports too.

"It's not either-or, it's both-and," said Aver, the researcher who made his son a half-and-half shirt for Euro 2024. He's hoping the tournament can help to bring German society together.

"It's important, now in a time of rising right-wing populism ... To put diversity in the foreground," he said. "So, I hope, and I wish that the fans celebrate together, commiserate together and experience joy together."

Valpuia to remain at Mumbai City FC until 2027

PTI ■ MUMBAI

Hmingthanmawia Ralte, also known as Valpuia, has extended his contract with Mumbai City FC and will remain at the club until the summer of 2027.

The club made the announcement in a release on Wednesday that Valpuia, who hails from Mizoram, has been a 'reliable player' at the club being a part of the team's 2020-21 historic season in which they won the ISL League's Shield as well as the ISL Cup. He started playing football at the age of eight and made impressive progress at the Aizawl FC, where Valpuia caught the attention of Mumbai City FC who brought him on board in June 2019.

Valpuia was loaned to Roundglass Punjab FC for the 2022-23 season where he remained a regular starter and helped the club to secure promotion in ISL.

Valpuia also scored his maiden goal for MCFC upon his return against Chennaiyin FC which helped the club to secure a position in the Kalinga Super Cup semifinal. He has played an overall 23 matches for MCFC including 17 in the ISL. "The club has played an instrumental role in my growth, both as a person and a player. The staff, teammates, and coaches have consistently helped me improve my game and shown unwavering trust in my abilities," he said.

"Valpuia is one of the best talents at our club. He dedicates a significant amount of time to training and developing his skills, and I am consistently impressed with his performance on the field. His commitment to improvement and his work ethic are commendable," said MCFC head coach Petr Kratky.

Man United manager Ten Hag to keep job after performance review, AP source says

AP ■ MANCHESTER (ENGLAND)

Erik ten Hag will stay on as Manchester United manager and is in negotiations to extend his contract, a person familiar with the situation told The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The person spoke on the condition of anonymity because the decision had not been publicly announced.

The decision ends months of uncertainty over Ten Hag's future after he oversaw United's worst league campaign in 34 years, but ended the season by winning the FA Cup with a victory over Manchester City.

United carried out an end-of-year review after last month's cup final and decided to stick with Ten Hag, who has won two trophies in as many seasons since joining the club from Ajax in 2022.

The FA Cup followed the English League Cup, which the Dutchman won in his first year at Old Trafford. But his second season in charge saw the 20-time champion suffer its lowest Premier League finish - eighth - losing 19 times in all competitions.

Ten Hag keeps his job in the face of a major overhaul of United's soccer operations by new co-owner Jim Ratcliffe. British billionaire Ratcliffe bought a 27.7% stake in the club in February and has hired a new CEO and technical director, with a sporting director on the way.

Ten Hag, who won three Dutch titles with Ajax, was Ratcliffe's last major call. He survived despite failing to meet Ratcliffe's challenge of securing Champions League qualification for next season.
